Hood's Sarsaparilla, a Spring Tonic-Medicine, Is Necessary

Everybody is troubled at this season with loss of vitality, failure of appetite, that tired feeling, or with bilious turns, dull headaches, indigestion and other stomach troubles, or with pimples and other eruptions on the face and body. The reason is that the blood is impure and impoverished.

Hood's Sarsaparilla relieves all these ailments. It is the old reliable medicine that has stood the test of forty years—that makes pure, rich, red blood—that strengthens every organ and builds up the whole system. BANK EMPLOYEE
STOLE $41,000

Assistant Cashier of Stoneham, Mass., Institution Arrested for Embezzlement

TRUSTED EMPLOYEE
WAS PAID $18 A WEEK

Reported That Harry A. Jones, the Accused, Has Admitted His Guilt

Boston, June 8.—Harry A. Jones of Stoneham, clerk and assistant cashier of the Stoneham National bank is under arrest in the federal building, charged with the embezzlement of about $41,000 of the cash of the bank. He is said to have admitted his guilt to officials of the bank who discovered the discrepancy in the accounts. He was arrested yesterday by United States Deputy Marshal Condon in the office of United States District Attorney Anderson, to which he had been brought from Stoneham, following the closing of the doors by United States officials yesterday morning.

When arraigned before United States Commissioner Hayes, Jones pleaded not guilty and was held in $40,000 bonds for a hearing Friday. Mr. Anderson appeared for the government. If Jones does not obtain bail he will be sent to the jail in East Cambridge.

Jones is about forty-two years of age and has a wife and three children in Stoneham. The only explanation of the defalcation offered by Jones, according to bank officials, is that his pay of $18 a week was inadequate to meet his living expenses. He is said to have admitted that his tampering with the accounts of the bank began ten years or more ago.

The bank is closed and United States bank examiners are in charge. No business will be attempted until they have made a report.

Fred E. Nickerson, one of the directors of the bank, acted as spokesman for the officials. He said that of late the bank had been running hard; the results were not what they should have been. There has been an increase in the business, but not a corresponding increase in the results. Consequently, after the meeting of the directors last Monday evening the cashier, C. A. Bailey, Charles F. Black and Mr. Nickerson, directors, made an examination of the books. In their hasty survey they discovered enough to confirm their suspicion that all was not right with the bank. The accounts appeared to have been juggled. And there was a difference of almost $23,000 between the individual cards and the balance sheet.

As a result of this investigation they consulted Jones Tuesday morning and asked him about certain minor discrepancies, giving him an hour and a half to explain. When he did not make a satisfactory explanation they asked him about other and larger matters. Then, it is said, Jones admitted his wrongdoings. According to Mr. Nickerson, Jones said he didn't know how much money had been taken, or where it had gone, but he had used it for his living expenses. He said he could return some of it, perhaps one-third. Jones, according to Mr. Nickerson, remained very cool and collected and said: "I don't care what becomes of me, but I am sorry about my family."

He was taken in charge last night at 11:30 o'clock by Patrolman John O'Brien of the Boston police. Jones had been with the bank about fifteen years and was paid $18 a week. He lived in good style and had an automobile in his wife's name, but the reason the cashier between his salary and his term of living did not cause suspicion earlier was because his wife was supposed to have money. Jones was under $10,000 bonds. The undivided profits of the bank as of March 7, the date of the last examination, were $10,934.21, and the surplus fund $15,000. The deposits were about $140,000. The bank's capital is $50,000, so that the supposed losses represent a large part of that amount.

Director Nickerson said that he saw no reason for alarm, for the securities were still intact, only cash apparently having been taken, and he thought that with the assistant cashier's bond of $10,000 and the sale of surplus stock, the deficit could be made up.

The only reason that is put forward in explanation of the defalcation is that Jones needed the money for his family expenses; there has been a suggestion of speculation, but that is not given much weight.

As soon as the directors had turned over Jones to the police Tuesday night, the national bank examiners were called in and yesterday Examiner Harry F. Currier and an assistant were in charge and working on the books. Examiner Currier this morning posted a notice on the front door of the bank reading:

"This bank is closed by vote of its directors pending an investigation of its affairs."

Jones is a native of Stoneham and was educated there in the town schools. He married a Woburn girl and for a time they lived in Woburn, where he was prominent in politics. He served three terms in the city council and was president of his last term. Four years ago he moved back to Stoneham and his home is now at 66 Pleasant street. He attends the Unitarian church, is a member of the Stoneham finance board, and is financial secretary of Columbia lodge of Odd Fellows. He was one of the proprietors of the firm of J. A. Jones & Co., of Stoneham, insurance agents, a business established by his father. His wife could give no explanation of Jones' peculiarities yesterday.

The directors of the bank are William D. Brackett, C. H. Drew, C. A. Bailey, Judge William B. Stevens, C. W. Todd, Fred E. Nickerson and C. F. Buck. Mr. Brackett, a leather manufacturer, is president, Mr. Drew vice-president and Mr. Bailey cashier.

IRISH SETTLEMENT PLAN.

Dublin Parliament Minus Ulster Is Now Proposed.

Belfast, via London, June 8.—Sir Edward Carson, the Unionist leader, addressed 500 representative Ulstermen here Tuesday on the proposed terms of the Irish settlement. Members of the press were not admitted to the meeting.

Sir Edward outlined the main proposals contained in the plan of David Lloyd George. The main proposal, he explained, was for the establishment of a Parliament in Dublin with the exclusion from its authority of the counties of Antrim, Armagh, Down, Londonderry, Tyrone and Fermanagh, including the cities of Belfast and Londonderry. Protests from delegates from the counties Cavan, Donegal and Monaghan, which it is proposed to put under the Dublin Parliament, were heard at the meeting. No decision was reached, however, and it was agreed that the Unionists in the three counties last named should be consulted during the next few days.

The meeting then adjourned until Monday. According to those present, an earnest desire was shown at the conference to act with moderation. The opinion was expressed that if the three counties accept the proposal an agreement is certain.

The Report That Henry Ford Had Told Them to Vote for Hughes After First Ballot Is Denied.

HUGHES STILL UNPERTURBED.

He is Completely Isolated from the Chicago Convention.

Washington, June 8.—In the midst of a nation seething with political turmoil and unrest, Associate Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the supreme court is quietly working at his house in Washington, holding no communication with his supporters or with eager representatives of the press. It may not be generally known, but it is nevertheless the fact, that since candidacy for this office was thrust upon him, Mr. Hughes has not talked with a single newspaper correspondent. Every one of the few statements which have come from him have been made by his secretary, and every one of these was made reluctantly. Mr. Hughes is apparently as completely isolated from the Chicago convention as if he were at the north pole.

In order to correct misunderstandings which have arisen in regard to the justice's speech on Monday at the National Cathedral school for girls, it should be stated that while this speech was prepared in advance, and while typewritten copies were furnished to officials of the school, no newspaper or news association was notified that the justice was to deliver an address, and only the Associated Press "got the story," and that some time after the event. Although the telegraphing of this speech to Chicago and elsewhere made it the political sensation of the moment, Washington refused to become excited or to regard the address as other than a casual little speech to a class of girl graduates of which the speaker's daughter was a member. Local political circles, at least, where the justice's views on questions of the day are well known, refused to consider this speech as a "keynote" or to believe that by making it at this time Justice Hughes had any intention of breaking his self-set rule of silence on the political situation.

Mr. Hughes' present aloofness from politics recalls his attitude at the time of the Republican convention in 1912. The supreme court had adjourned and Mr. Hughes was somewhere in the woods of northern New York, camping and fishing. He was, nevertheless, within reach of the telegraph, and it is reliably stated that a certain Republican statesman, a personal friend of Mr. Hughes, and a leader in the party, more than once during the convention week wired the justice, urging upon him the nomination. Had the justice accepted at this time, it is possible that the then threatening Roosevelt split might have been averted, although it should be said for the sake of historical accuracy, that Mr. Hughes' Republican friend was not in the confidence of Colonel Roosevelt.

Undoubtedly Justice Hughes takes the ground to-day that he can say nothing about the nomination, because no one is yet in a position to offer it to him. In 1912 apparently, the gentleman who tel-graphed to Justice Hughes was in a position to speak, if not for the convention itself, then at least, for the leading forces of the convention. Whether Mr. Hughes' action at that time will be a precedent for a similar refusal this year is a very interesting question, but the two situations are so different that few would insist that his attitude in 1912 should be maintained in 1916.
